NEW YORK. NASHVILLE. The Movement to Reconstruct Tennes-nee-Pletcher's Scheme to Invite Congressional intervention.

Namyvilla, March 9.—The movement initigurated at Washington looking to uperting the present State government of Tennesco has alders and abstors here, who are moving beaven and cart to accomplish their purpose. The bead and front of the home cabal is Secretary Fischer, whose term of office is about up, and who is accused of swindling the State out of about $25,000. Before the Legislature commenced the inventigation of his alleged peculations he was a rampant Conservative, going so far in that direction as to invite the deconcilation and outracum of prominent Republicans in the State. After the convention had passed an ordinance vacating Fietcher's office after a certain period, and the Legislature got after him for alleged gross malfeastance in office, he changed his tune, and from denouncing Radicals of the Browniow pattern, he has come to out Hered all of them in clamper of the states over the mile form of the state of the second of the s he has come to out-Herod all of them in clau-oring for Congressional interference, and turning the State over to a military depotism. His latest dedge in this direction was perpet-trated posterday, when, with an injured air, he applied to Gen. Lovell, commander of the post, for troops to escort him to his home in Cleveland, East Tennessee. Of course he ex-pected a refusal, as the Governor was the proper person to make application to if troops were needed. Senter and Fietcher are at loggerheads, however, and this would give the prefer to apply to President Grant, which it is understood he has stready done, and thus furnished additional reason why Tennessee needs reconstructing. This removed in knowing circles that the Kentucky Central Company has aiready turned their road over to the Pennsylvania Central on what is in effect a perpetual lease. The Kentucky Central has charters for a connection with Chattanooga. This will make it all clear salling for the Pennsylvania Central to all creation in the South and West.

Well, what of it? If the rumor is true Concinnati has about an order of the Concinnation of the South and West.

Well, what of it? If the rumor is true Concinnation of the South and West.

Well, what of it? If the rumor is true Concinnation of the South and West.

Chattanooga if Cincinnati got the benefit of it? If the Pennsylvania Central boild it she will do it with the row money, and we shall be saved a city debt of $10,000,000 on that account. Should the city build the road it would be sold out within two years, and the Pennsylvania Central would probably be the purchaser at half price. That powerful company would thus make some millions at our capense. If therefore, she has actually entered into such an arrangement with the Ken tony standards in pushing on her connection to Chattanooga, and probably would complete its before it could be done under the regueno bill.

The position of Cincinnati would be the same in relation to the trade of the South whether she build the road or whether it be built by the Pennsylvania Central. The road would be subject to our traffic to the full extent of our needs, no matter who may own the route.

We understood, a few days alone, from an intelligent railesy may, who was posted in remover, but he had had, for the passivers, her hands full, and had not yet given very ment attention to any project for a Southern connection; but we inferred, from his remarks, that she would soon take the question into consideration. 80 Some of the Radical newspapers are publishing a charming little romance. It is of "a Southern lady, said to be as beautiful as she is accomplished," who was so heroically loyal to the Government during the rebelikon that she "preferred to lose her plantation and seventeen hundred bales of cotton, ready for market, rather than yield allegiance to the South." We are assured further that "for several years she enchanted by her wealth"—consisting of her confiscated plantation and seven-teen hundred bales of cotton—"manners, beauty and talents the highest circles of Parisian society, and was offered choice of a husband from among the most opulent and best-titled noblemen." ROUND-ABOUT.

Colonel Lone, prominently connected with the Cuban revolution, has just arrived at New York, and the papers have lengthy reports of the news he brings. It is stated that the object of his mission is to prepare for a new expedition, the nature of which must for a time remain secret. In the most he of January he and two compenious constructed a "dug-on?" on the northern coast of Cuba, and in it made a trip to Jamales, wheree they brought a tong of gaspowder and a quantity of arms for the Cuban patients. He says that the insurgents on the eastern end of the island are in s most contented condition. They have established new farms; have established post roads, and are in every respect a properous people. The segrous, freed by the republican government, are at work on the plantations on wages paid by the government. They are rasing a case and corn, turning the banans and plantain into flour, and grass into thread and cith for the soldhers in the field. The Colonel says that, could the present season be stretched to the content of the summand of thousand men, would be utterly a milhilated, and the independence of Cuba secured without a dollar's aid from any foreign power. He says that these called the island are elamorous for arms, and ask for an island ask for an any foreign power. He says that these called the island are elamorous for arms, and ask for an island of Cubs secured without a dollar's aid from any foreign power. He says that these called one combatants in the castern and of the island are elemorous for arms, and ask for an early opportunity to advance upon the towas held by the Spanlards. Money is pienty, both gold and paper—the notes of the Cuban re-jublic passing readily at par.

There is nothing fiver, says the New Orgons Times, "in the range of modern poetry (so far as delicacy, purity and tendernoss may be considered), than the poems of Adelaide Proctor. No poem of great length remains to attest the fact that her flight could have been well snatimed, had she soared into the empresa, like Milton, but there is enough of beauty and true poetic conception in the scattered jewels left, to assure us that this woman-poet was no namby-pamby versifier. Her tenderoses and pathos equal the plaintive effusions of Mrs. Hemans or Lettila Landon herself. It may seem bold to affirm this, but let the impartial 'reader peruse her poems (they are not voluminous,) and then decide regarding the justice of such an assertion. The sngelle spirit which animated her earthly form has passed away. She died, aged twenty-form has passed away. She died, aged twenty-form has passed away is bedied, aged twenty-form has passed away. FROPOSITION TO MAKE A NEW COUNTY.

Some time ago a bill for the organization of a new county out of portions of Breckinridge and Mende, to be called Hanson, in honor of the distinguished Kentuckian and Confederate soldier of that name, was rejected by the House of Representatives. A motion to reconsider was made at the time of such rejection, and, accordingly, at yesterday's afternoon session the subject again was introduced in the House. This time the proposition for the formation of the new county was so amended as to require a majority vote, at an election to be hald in May, of the cilizens living in the acctions of Mende and Breckin-riege out of which it is proposed to form the new county, and the action of the House was that if a majority of such voters shall decide that the amount of the county and the action of the House was that if a second to the popular verdet the decision of any question in which the interests of the people are concerned.
